

Do any of you routinely use peak flow meters in your office or recommend that asthma patients use peak flow meters at home?

If so, do you have an inexpensive source for them (the meters and mouthpieces)?

- 1) I don't routinely use flow meters. I prefer the use of in-office computerized spirometry every three to six months.

- 2) The nebulizer med companies and asthma drug reps used to help provide them back in the day. It is pretty rare now, so we just have to write scripts and patients get them at the pharmacy.
